THE PROBLEM

Searching for a job is harder than it should be

Most job seekers are not short of effort. They apply to dozens of openings, hear nothing back, and slowly lose confidence. In most cases the issue is not talent. It is that nobody ever taught them how the process actually works.

Does any of this sound familiar?

- You send applications every day and rarely get a reply, and you don't know why.
- Your resume looks like everyone else's, or you're not sure what to highlight and what to leave out.
- You don't know how to approach an HR or a recruiter, or what to write in that email or message.
- LinkedIn feels confusing, and you're unsure whether your profile helps or hurts you.
- You don't know which skills, courses or companies are worth your time, so you jump between random videos and certificates.
- Interviews make you nervous because you've never practised them properly.
- You're applying alone, with nobody to tell you what's going wrong.

> Why this matters: Every month without a plan costs confidence, not just time. A job seeker who applies with a clear target, a tailored resume and a follow-up habit has a very different search from one who sends the same resume everywhere and waits.

About Stepright

Stepright was started with a simple belief: the right guidance can help people approach their careers with greater clarity and confidence.

We offer personalised career mentorship to graduates and early-career job seekers, with practical support for resumes, job applications, recruiter outreach, and interview preparation. The focus is on understanding each person's goals and helping them take clear, achievable steps towards employment.

Why I started it

Over the years, I've helped friends and juniors with their resumes, job applications, HR outreach, and interview preparation. Seeing them move forward made me realise how valuable practical guidance can be.

I also know what it feels like to navigate your career without someone to guide you. Stepright grew from that experience, with the aim of making this kind of support more accessible to others.

This pilot is the beginning of that effort: a personal, structured mentorship programme built around practical guidance, honest feedback, and individual goals.

THE PROGRAMME

Stepright: 50 days, one clear direction

A structured, one-on-one mentorship for graduates and early-career job seekers. You get a personal plan, honest feedback on your applications, and someone to talk to along the way.

How the 50 days work

Phase	What we do	What you leave with
Start Day 1 to 2	One-on-one introduction call (30 to 60 minutes). We understand your background, goals, and what's been going wrong. You fill a short form beforehand so we use the time well.	A clear target (1 or 2 roles), an honest diagnosis, your first action list
Foundation Day 1 to 7	Resume rebuilt or improved, with feedback rounds. LinkedIn profile fixed. A simple tracker set up to log every application.	A job-ready resume and LinkedIn profile; application tracker
Build Day 8 to 20	Skill gaps identified for your target role. If a course or small project is truly needed, we suggest the right one (free where possible). We build your list of target companies.	A focused skill plan and a target company list
Apply Day 21 to 40	A daily routine: tailored applications, outreach to HRs and recruiters, and proper follow-ups. We share openings we come across and review your applications and messages.	Applications that stand out; a habit you can keep using
Interview Day 41 to 50	Reading a job description, preparing answers, AI-assisted practice questions, mock interview, and how to respond when a call comes. Basics of salary negotiation.	Interview confidence and a clear approach to offers

How we stay in touch

- Regular catch-up calls (phone or video, whichever suits you), scheduled around your day. These are conversations, not a stopwatch: we spend the time the situation needs.
- WhatsApp support for quick questions, resume edits and application feedback.
- Weekly review of your tracker: what you sent, what came back, what to change.

What's included

- Personal one-on-one introduction session and a written 50-day roadmap
- Resume rebuild with feedback rounds, plus LinkedIn profile guidance
- How to approach HRs and recruiters (what to write, when, and how to follow up) and how to tailor each application to a job description
- Interview preparation with AI-generated practice questions, a mock interview and salary negotiation basics
- Openings and opportunities we come across, shared as they fit your profile
- Templates you can reuse: resume, outreach emails, follow-ups, tracker

IS THIS FOR YOU?

Who Stepright is for

A good fit if you…	Probably not the right fit if you…
• Are a graduate or early in your career, and looking for a job • Are ready to put in daily effort for 50 days • Want honest feedback, even when it's uncomfortable • Are open to learning how the process really works	• Want someone to get you a job without your own effort • Are looking for a guaranteed placement or referral • Cannot spend even a little time each day on your search • Are targeting highly specialised fields (for example surgery or core research) where we have no experience

AN HONEST PROMISE

What we promise, and what we don't

We do not promise you a job. No honest mentor can. Hiring depends on the market, the company and your own effort. What we promise is a clear plan, honest feedback, our real time and attention, and a process that makes your search far stronger than it is today.

- We will tell you the truth about your resume and your approach, even when it's not what you hoped to hear.
- We will never ask you for money in exchange for a job, and neither should anyone else.
- Your resume and personal details stay private and are never shared without your permission.
- If you finish the 50 days and are still searching, you're welcome in the Stepright alumni group, where openings and tips are shared, and you can still reach out for guidance.

Questions people ask

Will you get me a job?
No, and we won't pretend otherwise. We'll guide your process, review your work and share opportunities we come across. The effort and the outcome are yours, but you won't be doing it alone.

Who will I be speaking to?
Stepright is run by a working professional with three years of experience, who has been mentoring friends and juniors for years. We keep names off the brochure, but in our first conversation, before you pay anything, we'll tell you who is mentoring you and answer any questions about our background.

What if I have little or no experience?
That's fine. We'll work out how to present your education, projects and skills honestly and strongly, and what small steps can strengthen your profile. If you already have experience, we'll make it work harder for you.

Do I need to buy courses?
Not by default. Only if there's a real skill gap for your target role, and we'll point you to free options first. We don't earn anything from the courses we suggest.

How much time do I need each day?
Plan on 1 to 2 hours a day for focused work. The more consistent you are, the better the results.

What happens after 50 days?
You'll have your resume, your process and your templates. If you haven't landed a role yet, you stay in the alumni group and can still reach out for guidance.

Is my information private?
Yes. Your resume, details and conversations are kept confidential.

What if it isn't right for me?
Message us first. We'll tell you honestly whether we can help, before you pay anything.
